

THE DAILY SENTINEL.

Editor, Wm. H. Wilson & John H. Miller
PROPRIETORS.CROSS THE NAME AND PINK OF RUFUS KING & CO.

MILWAUKEE:

Saturday Morning, Feb. 9, '56.

Terms to Mail Subscribers:

Daily, per copy, $1.00

Weekly, per copy, 50¢

Quarterly, per copy, 30¢

Annual, per copy, 120¢

In Advance.

News of the Morning.

Gen. Cass met with a very serious accident at Washington, yesterday, by slipping down the stairs at the Patent Office. The latest accounts extend the hope that he will recover from the shock.

Mr. Secretary Mayne has promptly declined to receive Mr. Parker L. Fauch, the filibuster, and his friends from New Orleans.

Our abstract of the Legislative proceedings failed to reach us last evening, so that we are without record of yesterday's doings.

The New York market continues to drop under the power rumors and the expectation of large losses from the North.

No signs of the peace last night.

Mail and Meeting To-Night.

Our Business Men, Estate Owners, Mechanics, and others, interested in the growth and prosperity of our city, and willing to bear a hand in helping along the improvements necessary to extend and maintain its commercial ascendancy, are invited to the adjourned meeting on the subject of the Fox River Valley Rail-Road, to be held at Young's Hall this evening.

Paying its respects to past years, called attention to the importance of this road, and urged upon the Legislature the policy of aiding in its construction.

We will only add, at present, that the joint committee is in favor of the project, and that prompt and decided action on our part will ensure its success.

In connection with this matter, Messrs. Everts, of Dehaven, and Keyser, of Milwaukee, have called a meeting of all the members of our Milwaukee Club, to-morrow, to call the "whole world" before "Gov'r," saying that it had "presented certain bills to the acting Governor, for his signature."

The Tribune—BIRKIE—Who is in SHAW?

The Madison Democrat, the official organ of the Democrats, is in a minority, in accounting for the recently discovered leak in the State Treasury, made up of the following strong language:

The truth is, as far as we learn it, that the Tribune is guilty of leaking the last news, and a half year, to near the beginning of '55. James' first term, under Gov. Farwell, to the Tribune, then, since that time, neglect, carelessness, and error are apparent. The most recent news, however, has been accounted with a honestnes, to say the least highly reprehensible.

The origin of leaking in Gov. Farwell's name, in '55, is sufficiently apparent. It is to make out that both high political parties in this state have a common responsibility for Mr. James' errors. But the law and the testiment are to the contrary.

Mr. O'Neill is a member of the Committee, pro or against the use of the word in question. He thought that it was child's play to bring up this subject constantly.

Mr. Hadley also was troubled on the subject, and thought the word as liable to do—I can't help it—acting Governor.

Mr. Sholes thought Mr. Dunn might change his motion as to the Senate's striking out the word instead of returning the Report. Mr. Dunn did so; and then the motion failed, Democratic and Mr. Sholes voting aye, and 11 Republican no.

The Assembly did nothing, neither of parties.

The joint committee for investigation of the affairs of the departments has organized by the choice of Senator Taylor as Chairman. The work before them is one of very great importance, and will require intense application. The choice of the Chairman, which I understand was made by no party division, shows a desire to go into a thorough investigation. It is, I think, possible to do.

The Committee consists of Senator Taylor, Smith, and Watkinson, of the treasury, and Mr. Chapman, of the Auditor, and Mr. Johnson, of the Comptroller.

The State paper informs us that "there is a real vein" Mr. JAMES being all the while there, "neglect, confusion and error are apparent" throughout the books, and that the vast sum in the Treasury have been accounted with a honestnes that is, to say the least, highly reprehensible.

We think as much, but upon whom does the blame rest for this state of things? Who is responsible for the "neglect, confusion, and error" in the books? Whose duty was it to keep clear and distinct account of all money received and expended for the State; to "act as treasurer," every quarter, the condition of the Treasury; and to report thereon, in writing, to the Governor? All this the Speaker did.

The Madison people insist that Comptroller Dunn took advantage of Seymour's good nature and a lack of knowledge of the law, and berate the Legislature for their reports, but I do not believe so.

Mr. Sholes thought Mr. Dunn ought to change his motion as to the Senate's striking out the word instead of returning the Report. Mr. Dunn did so; and then the motion failed, Democratic and Mr. Sholes voting aye, and 11 Republican no.

The Assembly did nothing, neither of parties.

The joint committee for investigation of the affairs of the departments has organized by the choice of Senator Taylor as Chairman. The work before them is one of very great importance, and will require intense application. The choice of the Chairman, which I understand was made by no party division, shows a desire to go into a thorough investigation. It is, I think, possible to do.

The Committee consists of Senator Taylor, Smith, and Watkinson, of the treasury, and Mr. Chapman, of the Auditor, and Mr. Johnson, of the Comptroller.

The State paper informs us that "there is a real vein" Mr. JAMES being all the while there, "neglect, confusion and error are apparent" throughout the books, and that the vast sum in the Treasury have been accounted with a honestnes that is, to say the least, highly reprehensible.

We think as much, but upon whom does the blame rest for this state of things? Who is responsible for the "neglect, confusion, and error" in the books? Whose duty was it to keep clear and distinct account of all money received and expended for the State; to "act as treasurer," every quarter, the condition of the Treasury; and to report thereon, in writing, to the Governor? All this the Speaker did.

The Madison people insist that Comptroller Dunn took advantage of Seymour's good nature and a lack of knowledge of the law, and berate the Legislature for their reports, but I do not believe so.

Mr. Sholes thought Mr. Dunn ought to change his motion as to the Senate's striking out the word instead of returning the Report. Mr. Dunn did so; and then the motion failed, Democratic and Mr. Sholes voting aye, and 11 Republican no.

The Assembly did nothing, neither of parties.

The joint committee for investigation of the affairs of the departments has organized by the choice of Senator Taylor as Chairman. The work before them is one of very great importance, and will require intense application. The choice of the Chairman, which I understand was made by no party division, shows a desire to go into a thorough investigation. It is, I think, possible to do.

The Committee consists of Senator Taylor, Smith, and Watkinson, of the treasury, and Mr. Chapman, of the Auditor, and Mr. Johnson, of the Comptroller.

The State paper informs us that "there is a real vein" Mr. JAMES being all the while there, "neglect, confusion and error are apparent" throughout the books, and that the vast sum in the Treasury have been accounted with a honestnes that is, to say the least, highly reprehensible.

We think as much, but upon whom does the blame rest for this state of things? Who is responsible for the "neglect, confusion, and error" in the books? Whose duty was it to keep clear and distinct account of all money received and expended for the State; to "act as treasurer," every quarter, the condition of the Treasury; and to report thereon, in writing, to the Governor? All this the Speaker did.

The Madison people insist that Comptroller Dunn took advantage of Seymour's good nature and a lack of knowledge of the law, and berate the Legislature for their reports, but I do not believe so.

Mr. Sholes thought Mr. Dunn ought to change his motion as to the Senate's striking out the word instead of returning the Report. Mr. Dunn did so; and then the motion failed, Democratic and Mr. Sholes voting aye, and 11 Republican no.

The Assembly did nothing, neither of parties.

The joint committee for investigation of the affairs of the departments has organized by the choice of Senator Taylor as Chairman. The work before them is one of very great importance, and will require intense application. The choice of the Chairman, which I understand was made by no party division, shows a desire to go into a thorough investigation. It is, I think, possible to do.

The Committee consists of Senator Taylor, Smith, and Watkinson, of the treasury, and Mr. Chapman, of the Auditor, and Mr. Johnson, of the Comptroller.

The State paper informs us that "there is a real vein" Mr. JAMES being all the while there, "neglect, confusion and error are apparent" throughout the books, and that the vast sum in the Treasury have been accounted with a honestnes that is, to say the least, highly reprehensible.

We think as much, but upon whom does the blame rest for this state of things? Who is responsible for the "neglect, confusion, and error" in the books? Whose duty was it to keep clear and distinct account of all money received and expended for the State; to "act as treasurer," every quarter, the condition of the Treasury; and to report thereon, in writing, to the Governor? All this the Speaker did.

The Madison people insist that Comptroller Dunn took advantage of Seymour's good nature and a lack of knowledge of the law, and berate the Legislature for their reports, but I do not believe so.

Mr. Sholes thought Mr. Dunn ought to change his motion as to the Senate's striking out the word instead of returning the Report. Mr. Dunn did so; and then the motion failed, Democratic and Mr. Sholes voting aye, and 11 Republican no.

The Assembly did nothing, neither of parties.

The joint committee for investigation of the affairs of the departments has organized by the choice of Senator Taylor as Chairman. The work before them is one of very great importance, and will require intense application. The choice of the Chairman, which I understand was made by no party division, shows a desire to go into a thorough investigation. It is, I think, possible to do.

The Committee consists of Senator Taylor, Smith, and Watkinson, of the treasury, and Mr. Chapman, of the Auditor, and Mr. Johnson, of the Comptroller.

The State paper informs us that "there is a real vein" Mr. JAMES being all the while there, "neglect, confusion and error are apparent" throughout the books, and that the vast sum in the Treasury have been accounted with a honestnes that is, to say the least, highly reprehensible.

We think as much, but upon whom does the blame rest for this state of things? Who is responsible for the "neglect, confusion, and error" in the books? Whose duty was it to keep clear and distinct account of all money received and expended for the State; to "act as treasurer," every quarter, the condition of the Treasury; and to report thereon, in writing, to the Governor? All this the Speaker did.

The Madison people insist that Comptroller Dunn took advantage of Seymour's good nature and a lack of knowledge of the law, and berate the Legislature for their reports, but I do not believe so.

Mr. Sholes thought Mr. Dunn ought to change his motion as to the Senate's striking out the word instead of returning the Report. Mr. Dunn did so; and then the motion failed, Democratic and Mr. Sholes voting aye, and 11 Republican no.

The Assembly did nothing, neither of parties.

The joint committee for investigation of the affairs of the departments has organized by the choice of Senator Taylor as Chairman. The work before them is one of very great importance, and will require intense application. The choice of the Chairman, which I understand was made by no party division, shows a desire to go into a thorough investigation. It is, I think, possible to do.

The Committee consists of Senator Taylor, Smith, and Watkinson, of the treasury, and Mr. Chapman, of the Auditor, and Mr. Johnson, of the Comptroller.

The State paper informs us that "there is a real vein" Mr. JAMES being all the while there, "neglect, confusion and error are apparent" throughout the books, and that the vast sum in the Treasury have been accounted with a honestnes that is, to say the least, highly reprehensible.

We think as much, but upon whom does the blame rest for this state of things? Who is responsible for the "neglect, confusion, and error" in the books? Whose duty was it to keep clear and distinct account of all money received and expended for the State; to "act as treasurer," every quarter, the condition of the Treasury; and to report thereon, in writing, to the Governor? All this the Speaker did.

The Madison people insist that Comptroller Dunn took advantage of Seymour's good nature and a lack of knowledge of the law, and berate the Legislature for their reports, but I do not believe so.

Mr. Sholes thought Mr. Dunn ought to change his motion as to the Senate's striking out the word instead of returning the Report. Mr. Dunn did so; and then the motion failed, Democratic and Mr. Sholes voting aye, and 11 Republican no.

The Assembly did nothing, neither of parties.

The joint committee for investigation of the affairs of the departments has organized by the choice of Senator Taylor as Chairman. The work before them is one of very great importance, and will require intense application. The choice of the Chairman, which I understand was made by no party division, shows a desire to go into a thorough investigation. It is, I think, possible to do.

The Committee consists of Senator Taylor, Smith, and Watkinson, of the treasury, and Mr. Chapman, of the Auditor, and Mr. Johnson, of the Comptroller.

The State paper informs us that "there is a real vein" Mr. JAMES being all the while there, "neglect, confusion and error are apparent" throughout the books, and that the vast sum in the Treasury have been accounted with a honestnes that is, to say the least, highly reprehensible.

We think as much, but upon whom does the blame rest for this state of things? Who is responsible for the "neglect, confusion, and error" in the books? Whose duty was it to keep clear and distinct account of all money received and expended for the State; to "act as treasurer," every quarter, the condition of the Treasury; and to report thereon, in writing, to the Governor? All this the Speaker did.

The Madison people insist that Comptroller Dunn took advantage of Seymour's good nature and a lack of knowledge of the law, and berate the Legislature for their reports, but I do not believe so.

Mr. Sholes thought Mr. Dunn ought to change his motion as to the Senate's striking out the word instead of returning the Report. Mr. Dunn did so; and then the motion failed, Democratic and Mr. Sholes voting aye, and 11 Republican no.

The Assembly did nothing, neither of parties.

The joint committee for investigation of the affairs of the departments has organized by the choice of Senator Taylor as Chairman. The work before them is one of very great importance, and will require intense application. The choice of the Chairman, which I understand was made by no party division, shows a desire to go into a thorough investigation. It is, I think, possible to do.

The Committee consists of Senator Taylor, Smith, and Watkinson, of the treasury, and Mr. Chapman, of the Auditor, and Mr. Johnson, of the Comptroller.

The State paper informs us that "there is a real vein" Mr. JAMES being all the while there, "neglect, confusion and error are apparent" throughout the books, and that the vast sum in the Treasury have been accounted with a honestnes that is, to say the least, highly reprehensible.

We think as much, but upon whom does the blame rest for this state of things? Who is responsible for the "neglect, confusion, and error" in the books? Whose duty was it to keep clear and distinct account of all money received and expended for the State; to "act as treasurer," every quarter, the condition of the Treasury; and to report thereon, in writing, to the Governor? All this the Speaker did.

The Madison people insist that Comptroller Dunn took advantage of Seymour's good nature and a lack of knowledge of the law, and berate the Legislature for their reports, but I do not believe so.

Mr. Sholes thought Mr. Dunn ought to change his motion as to the Senate's striking out the word instead of returning the Report. Mr. Dunn did so; and then the motion failed, Democratic and Mr. Sholes voting aye, and 11 Republican no.

The Assembly did nothing, neither of parties.

The joint committee for investigation of the affairs of the departments has organized by the choice of Senator Taylor as Chairman. The work before them is one of very great importance, and will require intense application. The choice of the Chairman, which I understand was made by no party division, shows a desire to go into a thorough investigation. It is, I think, possible to do.

The Committee consists of Senator Taylor, Smith, and Watkinson, of the treasury, and Mr. Chapman, of the Auditor, and Mr. Johnson, of the Comptroller.

The State paper informs us that "there is a real vein" Mr. JAMES being all the while there, "neglect, confusion and error are apparent" throughout the books, and that the vast sum in the Treasury have been accounted with a honestnes that is, to say the least, highly reprehensible.

We think as much, but upon whom does the blame rest for this state of things? Who is responsible for the "neglect, confusion, and error" in the books? Whose duty was it to keep clear and distinct account of all money received and expended for the State; to "act as treasurer," every quarter, the condition of the Treasury; and to report thereon, in writing, to the Governor? All this the Speaker did.

The Madison people insist that Comptroller Dunn took advantage of Seymour's good nature and a lack of knowledge of the law, and berate the Legislature for their reports, but I do not believe so.

Mr. Sholes thought Mr. Dunn ought to change his motion as to the Senate's striking out the word instead of returning the Report. Mr. Dunn did so; and then the motion failed, Democratic and Mr. Sholes voting aye, and 11 Republican no.

The Assembly did nothing, neither of parties.

The joint committee for investigation of the affairs of the departments has organized by the choice of Senator Taylor as Chairman. The work before them is one of very great importance, and will require intense application. The choice of the Chairman, which I understand was made by no party division, shows a desire to go into a thorough investigation. It is, I think, possible to do.

The Committee consists of Senator Taylor, Smith, and Watkinson, of the treasury, and Mr. Chapman, of the Auditor, and Mr. Johnson, of the Comptroller.

The State paper informs us that "there is a real vein" Mr. JAMES being all the while there, "neglect, confusion and error are apparent" throughout the books, and that the vast sum in the Treasury have been accounted with a honestnes that is, to say the least, highly reprehensible.

We think as much, but upon whom does the blame rest for this state of things? Who is responsible for the "neglect, confusion, and error" in the books? Whose duty was it to keep clear and distinct account of all money received and expended for the State; to "act as treasurer," every quarter, the condition of the Treasury; and to report thereon, in writing, to the Governor? All this the Speaker did.

The Madison people insist that Comptroller Dunn took advantage of Seymour's good nature and a lack of knowledge of the law, and berate the Legislature for their reports, but I do not believe so.

Mr. Sholes thought Mr. Dunn ought to change his motion as to the Senate's striking out the word instead of returning the Report. Mr. Dunn did so; and then the motion failed, Democratic and Mr. Sholes voting aye, and 11 Republican no.

The Assembly did nothing, neither of parties.

The joint committee for investigation of the affairs of the departments has organized by the choice of Senator Taylor as Chairman. The work before them is one of very great importance, and will require intense application. The choice of the Chairman, which I understand was made by no party division, shows a desire to go into a thorough investigation. It is, I think, possible to do.

The Committee consists of Senator Taylor, Smith, and Watkinson, of the treasury, and Mr. Chapman, of the Auditor, and Mr. Johnson, of the Comptroller.

The State paper informs us that "there is a real vein" Mr. JAMES being all the while there, "neglect, confusion and error are apparent" throughout the books, and that the vast sum in the Treasury have been accounted with a honestnes that is, to say the least, highly reprehensible.

We think as much, but upon whom

Religious Services will be held to-morrow, as follows:

Episcopal, Rev. W. W. Arnett, cur. A. N. P. N.

Methodist, Rev. David Keene, min.

Swing. Episc., Rev. J. P. T. Ingallan,

First Presbyterian, Rev. G. S. Peters, corner

First Presbyterian, Rev. J. M. Merle,

Methodist, Rev. John M. Buchanan,

Second Methodist, Rev. S. Bennett,

Methodist, Rev. S. M. McWright,

Methodist, Rev. S. A. Meldrum, cur. Min.

John's Cathedral, Calvary, Ebenezer, etc.

Second Advent, Rev. F. X. DeGroot, Second

Saints, Rev. J. C. St. John, etc.

St. Paul's, Catholic, Rev. Dr. F.

Trinity, Catholic, Rev. Joseph Schader, etc.

Episcopal, Rev. A. M. Lathrop,

Methodist, Rev. J. C. Jackson, etc.

Methodist, Rev. S. M. McWright,

Methodist, Rev. S. A. Meldrum, cur. Min.

Grace Street and City Mission, Rev. A. C.

Pentecostal, etc.

Methodist, Michigan and Jefferson Sts.

Methodist, North and South Sts.

South Presbyterian Church, Fifth Ward, Rev.

Rev. Dr. Young's Hall,

Methodist, Young's Hall,

&lt;p

